

SCENE IN THE CAMPUS.

LOCATION

Pacific University is located at Forest Grove, a beautiful residence town of about one thousand inhabitants. It is situated on the Southern Pacific Railroad, west side, twenty-six miles from Portland, and is easily reached by two trains daily from either direction. Located at the base of the Coast Range of mountains, it is peculiarly healthful. No drinking saloons are permitted in the town, and the temptations and dangers often surrounding school life are much fewer than in most places of its size.

AIMS

The institution was founded in 1848 for the purpose of giving to the young people of the Northwest an opportunity of getting a thorough education under distinctly Christian, though not sectarian, influences. The teachers are men and women whose influence is helpful and stimulating and with whom the students come into that intimate relation which is of such vital importance in college life.

A GLANCE THROUGH THE COLLEGE CAMPUS.

EQUIPMENT

The college campus contains about thirty acres, covered in part with a beautiful grove of oaks. There are five buildings in all. The largest, Marsh Hall, is a brick building used for general purposes, and contains the chapel, recitation rooms, the library and rooms of the Literary Societies and Christian Associations. Science Hall contains the laboratories for Biology and Chemistry and the museum. Herrick Hall is a dormitory for young women, and is so conducted as to furnish a well-regulated Christian home for young women from out of town.

The Academy building contains rooms for the lower classes who remain in the rooms during study hours.

GYMNASIUM.

The gymnasium is well equipped with apparatus most necessary for physical development.

The library of about 11,000 volumes gives excellent facilities for study and general reading, and the reading room contains the best magazines and periodicals of the day. Lectures are given at intervals during the year upon subjects of interest by prominent men.

STUDENT LIFE

Student life is simple and quiet and yet full of healthful vigor.

The literary societies give opportunity for debating and the Christian associations develop the spiritual life and cultivate the Christian activity of the students.

Moderate athletic sports are encouraged, and football and baseball teams are maintained for the young men, and basketball for the young women.

For the coming year Mr. Thomas L. McFadden, a graduate of Stanford University, and a football player of five years' experience, has been engaged to coach the football team.

There is a four-lap running track on the campus where students prepare for the annual field meet.

A bowling alley in the basement of Marsh Hall is available to all, and several tennis courts furnish healthful exercise and recreation.

A chorus class is conducted for the benefit of those who are interested in singing and sight-reading.

An archery club affords opportunity to engage in that lightful sport. Oratorical contests and intercollegiate debates have formed a prominent feature of the student life of the University. As a stimulus to public speaking, prizes have been offered during the past two years for excellence in that art.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION

Students may be admitted without examination from schools whose courses of study have been examined and the character of whose work has been approved. Students in order to enter the Academy proper must be ready to begin algebra and Latin, and for students not yet fitted for the regular academy courses, classes are formed when necessary in the common English branches.

In order to enter college, students must be fifteen years of age and have finished a course equivalent to that of Tualatin Academy.

COURSES OF STUDY

In the academy and the university there are three courses of study, classical, scientific and literary. Courses in the academy lead to the corresponding courses in the university. Although the value of fixed courses is recognized up to a certain point, college students are allowed to elect one-third of their work in the junior and senior years of the university, according to taste or purpose in life. Several optionals are also allowed, and the principle of freedom is being gradually extended.

Credit is given for work done in other schools to students seeking advanced standing, provided such work is found upon examination satisfactory. Emphasis is laid upon the discipline acquired rather than the special subjects studied.

Students are advised to enter a regular course in the academy or university, but are allowed to pursue special studies for which they are fitted.

MUSIC

The Conservatory of Music supplies superior facilities for the study of both instrumental and vocal music, and at lower rates than are usually demanded. The regular course of study covers four years in instrumental and three years in vocal music, and diplomas are awarded to those who have completed the required courses satisfactorily.

Students in the college are allowed to choose music as an elective in the literary course within a limited amount.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY CLASS OF 1901.

EXPENSES

Tuition and other expenses are made as low as possible, so as to bring a thorough education within the reach of all.

The tuition in the university is $15 a term. The tuition in the academy is $10 a term. There is also an incidental fee of $1 a term, to be used for library, reading room and gymnasium.

There are also small fees for some of the courses in science, ranging from 50 cents to $5, according to the course.

Rates of living are comparatively cheap in Forest Grove. Room and board can be secured by the young women at Herrick Hall at $3 to $4 per week, including light and heat.

Board at the same place may be obtained by young men for $2.50 per week.

In the Young Men's Dormitory rooms arranged for two may be secured for 20 cents each per week, not including heat and light. Board in student clubs may be obtained for about $1.50 per week.

In private families board may be obtained from $2 to $3.

It is estimated that the average necessary expenses for a college year range from a minimum of $135 to a maximum of $250.

No boy or girl desiring an education need hesitate because of expense. Students are often able to find employment in the town, and work about the college buildings is given to students as far as possible.

A limited number of scholarships is available for deserving students.

The Fall term begins Wednesday, September 18, 1901, the Winter term January 2, and the Spring term March 26.
