TOKYO - After his first full business day here, Gov, Vic Atiyeh said Monday that Oregon is the new darling of Japanese investors but Oregonians don't fully appreciate the ramifications.

"We are better positioned than any other state." Ativeh said. "This is recognized more in Japan than in Oregon. Take my word for it."

State Economic Development Director John Anderson, accompanying the governor on a 10-day trade .

mission here, put it more bluntly: "We don't have a state sophisticated enough to understand what's going on."

Atiyeh and Anderson met with top executives of Mitsubitsi and Nissan Motors: Mitsubitsi is one of Japan's largest trading companies, parent of Mitsubitsi Electric which spurned Salem last year to invest in North Carolina.

Attiveh said t-oth executives promised him that future investments would consider Oregon. He said the directness of their pledges in a country renown for ambiguity was a clear signal that Oregon won't be by-passed in the future.

The governor and members of the trade mission also paid a courtesy call on U.S. Ambassador Mike

Mansfield who told the group that getting tougher. 200 "We'll have to get off our butts and get to work," he said of American complacency.

Mansfield's staff said at least a dozen trade missions led by United States governors have come through Tokyo the past six months. Missouri's chief executive is here this week.

Atiyeh said Oregon's competitive advantage is gilded by a new report Issued by the Keidanren, an association of Japan's, 800 biggest industries. OF STATES LA

... The report, summing up the findcompetition from Asia is tough and hings of a Japanese trade mission to the state earlier this year, said: "Oregon seems to have been overlooked in between Washington and California."

Japanese television is also about to show a TV drama entitled "Love From Oregon," the story of a Japanese boy orphaned in an auto accident who goes to live with his aunt in Bend.

Hoping to cash in on its new-found popularity here, Oregon will officially open a new trade office in downtown Tokyo this week. David Lutjen, international trade specialist with the state Department of Economic Devevolpment, has been named acting director of the office and Zenii Motomura, Japanese Consul-General to Portland in the mid '70s, was named special adviser to the office.

The governor is scheduled to meet the crown prince and princess in private audience today. Embassy officals said such meetings are rare for the rank of Governor.

Atiyeh's red carpet trade mission is staying at the elegant Imperial Hotel where a cup of coffee costs $1.80 and a swim in the hotel pool cost $6.
