

PACIFIC
UNIVERSITY

IT ALL FITS TOGETHER

Pacific University, the Oregon outdoors and you.

The forests and waters teach us how nature's complex web of relationships encourages and sustains the growth of each individual life within it.

*Pacific University is like that — a community where everyone becomes part of an integrative whole;
a nourishing and stimulating place, with wise mentors to guide your achievements and good friends to welcome your involvement. Your strengths mature in this environment,
and your path becomes clear.
From the very beginning,
it feels right.*

*Pacific University and you

For four years, U.S. News & World Report has ranked Pacific University among the West's top colleges; and Barron's called Pacific "one of the best educational buys in America."

You are at the threshold of a new century. At Pacific University, you gain skills, knowledge and confidence to adapt and thrive in an unknown future. Pacific's size allows individual programs and personal attention from faculty for each student, while our breadth as a university provides a full range of career choices and preparation for graduate school.

*E*NVIRONMENT FOR LEARNING

Your classes at Pacific typically will average between 15 and 25 students. We know the best size for learning, and we limit our enrollment to stay at that size. Our 13:1 student-faculty ratio and strong tradition of faculty attention to each student assure you of an education that responds to your individual aspirations. With an enrollment of 1,000 undergraduate and 700 graduate students, this is education on a personal scale, where faculty members know you—your interests, your strengths and your goals. And your academic opportunities are enriched by the presence on campus of Pacific's four nationally-recognized professional schools.

Our graduates enter careers including communications, education, politics, music, business, and computer science. A strong percentage enter graduate schools in medicine, law, engineering, and health professions. They go out ready to lead fulfilling lives, enriched by the perspectives of the liberal arts and sciences.

RIGHT: "If we're gonna live together, we've gotta play together."

Your professors will lead you to ask questions, wrestle with issues and explore connections across disciplines. What can we learn from Native American forms of literature? a Greek theater festival? the Holocaust? You'll listen in as current issues are debated in an annual series by the likes of Arthur Schlesinger, Jeane Kirkpatrick, Patricia Schroeder, William F. Buckley, Jesse Jackson, and Robert Bork. At events Pacific sponsors in Portland, you'll hear literary luminaries like Norman Mailer, John Updike, Susan Sontag and Annie Dillard.

As you design your own educational experience, you can use individual research projects, independent study and internships for credit to bridge classroom theory and real-world practice. A botany student spent her summer researching the medicinal uses of plants on a Navajo reservation. A team of physics students worked at a nuclear reactor. A creative writing class used their skills to help migrant middle school students and women victims of domestic violence examine their experiences through writing.

The field is rich for internships, with many of Oregon's leading high-tech companies within the local area, and Portland's business and medical community a short freeway drive away. An internship in one of many available overseas settings could lead you into an international career.

Your global awareness will grow as you get to know international students from Europe, Africa and the Far East in your classes and residence halls, or study abroad in Guayaquil, Ecuador; Osaka, Japan; or any of Pacific's 13 international venues.

But, first things first. The step from high school to college work is a big one. At Pacific, we start by equipping you for the adjustment through Freshman Seminar, a two-semester, interdisciplinary course. A combination of stimulating classes, peer mentoring, formal and informal discussions with classmates and faculty, and evening events that enrich your classroom learning, your Freshman Seminar is designed to hone your study skills—note-taking, time management, word processing and composition of reports and papers—and make you a part of Pacific from the beginning.

Professors at Pacific put their home phone numbers on their class syllabi. Being accessible to students is an expectation, almost a competition among them. Open office doors, time for you when you need it, invitations to their homes, and graduate school recommendations are only the beginning. Your Pacific professors will know you well.

TEACHING COMES FIRST

You will have a class from a senior professor, even in your first year. After 18 or even 25 years, Pacific's seasoned faculty still want to help you get a good start.

They like to know what the new class is thinking. Chances are, during the out-of-class hours, they're enthusiastically creating a new course, or putting a fresh spin on an existing one. From the youngest Ph.D to the most experienced veterans, teaching is what Pacific professors love to do. They never tire of it.

Helping students is a point of honor with them. In small classes, in one-on-one talks in the office after class, in the hospitality of their homes, they put students first. Often, they go a step farther. For example, Pacific professors write many letters to help students enter graduate school or land a career position. Because our professors know students well, their letters have the kind of specifics that really make a difference in the final decision.

Standards are a point of honor, too. Faculty give you lots of help, but they also set expectations high, and hold you to them. Lab work and research are emphasized in the sciences. Every aspiring playwright's work gets a stage reading in a creative writing class. Independent achievement is fostered and rewarded. No Pacific student ever complains that it's too easy.

LEFT: Politics and government Professor Russ Dondero discusses the fine points of paper-writing with an interested student.

RIGHT: At Pacific, you'll find that our professors give top-priority to giving their students all of the individual attention that they need.

For location, Pacific University is thrice-blessed. First the grandeur of Oregon surrounds us with its famous coast, tumbling rivers and white-capped mountains; next door is Portland, a vibrant center of commerce and culture; and our home is Forest Grove, an agricultural town set at the upper end of Oregon's fertile Willamette Valley wine country.

THE PLACE TO BE

Your first week at Pacific University starts with a wilderness adventure. At Pacific, Oregon's great outdoors is both classroom and playground. Year-around skiing on Mt. Hood, wind-surfing in the Columbia Gorge, whale watching at the beach—all are at your doorstep. Kayaking is a favorite of Pacific students, along with hiking and camping in the nearby Coast Range.

No less beckoning is Portland, one of the America's most attractive cities, with the arts, fine restaurants, urban services and shopping only 25 minutes from campus. Portland is what a city should be—well-designed, efficient, lively and culturally diverse. Follow professional basketball's Trailblazers, or experience live theater or jazz. Get lost in Powell's, one of the nation's largest book stores.

The university's Outback program provides the equipment, planning and transportation to take you into the rugged outdoors, or exploring in the city — not only Portland, but also Vancouver, B.C., Seattle or San Francisco.

All this recreational richness could be distracting. That's why Pacific's home in Forest Grove is an advantage. When you are serious about academics, as Pacific students are, studying requires focus, and the campus in the residential quiet of Forest Grove can be the retreat you need to stay on task when the pressure's high. (You'll still need some discipline to avoid the usual buzz of campus activities.) But, as soon as your deadline is met, the beach, the mountains, and the city are waiting.

For a quick getaway, you can cycle three miles from campus to Hagg Lake, or stroll over to Main Street for a pizza or an espresso.

We think you'll agree, Pacific University is exactly the place to be.

ABOVE: A favorite destination, the beautiful city of Portland rises from the banks of the Willamette River.

RIGHT: 11,245 foot Mt. Hood is the tallest of Oregon's Cascade Mountains.

“At Pacific, you can do so many hands-on things the first year. As a freshman, I wrote for the newspaper, worked at the radio station and started a dance team. You can really build a resume here.”

*Amy Hylton
mass communications major,
Clackamas, Oregon*

You'll fit right in at Pacific, a friendly community that encourages being yourself. We respect each other's opinions and differences, and everyone's contribution is welcome — faculty, staff and students. Faces are familiar here and our life together is richer and safer because they are.

A COMMUNITY ADVENTURE

There's a place for you in whatever you choose at Pacific: athletics, music, theater, student government, campus radio, the newspaper or any of more than 65 clubs and organizations. If there's no club in your interest area, you can gather a few like-minded students and start one.

Boxer varsity athletics produced five nationally ranked teams out of 13 in 1992-3: men's and women's basketball, women's softball, men's wrestling and golf. The coed club handball team, ranked fourth in the nation, brought home seven national championships against major universities. Intramurals offer you a chance for exercise and competition just for the fun of it. Or you can keep fit in the dance studio, racquetball or squash courts, weight-training room, tennis courts or jogging paths.

RIGHT: McCormick Residence Hall, built in 1924.

Music and the arts fill the campus calendar with concerts, plays, and exhibits and student attendance is high. The choir performed classical and sacred works last year on a tour to Hawaji. The jazz band is a popular attraction wherever the group performs. A multi-million dollar new music complex provides a setting to match the excellence of Pacific's creative and performing arts programs.

Any weekend you want to break away from the books, there's a group ready to go "yakking" some open water, or whale watching on the coastline. Others are headed for the theater or the Saturday Market in downtown Portland. On campus, there are lectures, movies, dances, sports events and the perpetual "beach" volleyball game in The Pit. An annual luau by the Hawaiian Club draws thousands, and the International Club's dinner offers samples of cuisine from many lands. There's a lot to do, and nearly everyone is involved.

A more serious aspect of our community life arises when there's an issue to debate. The entire campus community assembles to hear and discuss campus policies on such topics as political correctness, the rise of hate groups and national issues such as Desert Storm. Lively political dialogue goes on regularly in residence halls and over coffee at the University Center.

“We have woven service into the curriculum at all levels. Our students prescribe glasses for the poor in Mexico, help in a ghetto health clinic in Ecuador, and tutor Hispanic children here in the Willamette Valley.”

*Don Rushmer
provost*

Pacific's emphasis on service dates back to its founding 145 years ago by the United Church of Christ, whose interest in Far Eastern missions is echoed today in our growing Pacific Rim exchanges. Today, however, the desire to serve flows from our four distinguished health care professional schools and permeates the undergraduate school as well.

*M*AKING A BETTER WORLD

Our community is enthusiastic about service. You may volunteer to help out on campus guiding visitors, helping plan freshman orientation or coordinating a campus and community recycling program. Or you may reach into the larger community to volunteer at the Metro Crisis Center, dispense vision care in underdeveloped areas of Mexico, Columbia and Vietnam, or help build homes in Mexico through Habitat for Humanity. One group of students wrote, directed and produced a public service video on shoplifting that was used by a national retail chain.

Pacific's science faculty give their time to encourage middle school and junior high girls to study the sciences. And they offer in-service training to teachers who might encourage students' scientific interests. The education and language departments collaborated to prepare teachers who could teach Japanese to those who need the language in business.

Through our Humanitarian Center, service needs and volunteers are matched, and students move into the community to help where it's needed. When one becomes involved with others' lives, it takes you beyond yourself and you grow into a more mature person. That's why at Pacific, we believe that service is a valuable component of an educational experience.

PRIDE OF OWNERSHIP

*B*efore you've been at Pacific long, you'll discover a growing sense of pride in "your university."

You'll learn, as I have, how satisfying it is to belong to a community with high standards of excellence, a commitment to caring, and a strong tradition of service.

You'll come to admire your professors for their dedication to your success, and feel lucky to know them.

You'll see yourself and your classmates gain confidence as you prepare for success in your first careers, and gain adaptability to grow into your second and third ones, as the future brings unforeseen opportunities.

And you'll soon be an enthusiast, as we all are, for the abundant lifestyle our Oregon location affords.

I congratulate you on your choice. You have done well.

Robert F. Duvall

GETTING STARTED AT PACIFIC

In considering your application, the Admissions Office looks for indications of your ability to succeed in Pacific's challenging academic curriculum. We examine your transcripts and standardized test scores, read your application essay and recommendations and consider your interview. The essay provides you an opportunity to express your individuality and describe your special talents. The recommendations reaffirm your potential and an interview assures that all questions have been asked and answered.

Beyond test scores and grade point averages, we look for extra-curricular involvement, accelerated and honors courses, and positions of leadership and responsibility. We are looking for students who will both participate and be successful at Pacific.

ENTERING FRESHMEN applicants must submit a completed application form, with application fee; an official transcript of high school course work; SAT or ACT scores; and recommendations. We strongly advise an interview with an admissions representative.

TRANSFER APPLICANTS must submit a completed application form, with application fee; transcripts from all post-secondary institutions attended (if you have less than 30 college credit hours, you must also submit a high school transcript with SAT or ACT scores); and recommendations. We strongly recommend an interview with an admissions representative.

THE STARTING DATE for review of completed applications is November 1. We encourage you to apply early. We give priority to applications received by March 15. Late applications are considered on a space-available basis.

FACTS ABOUT PACIFIC

FINANCIAL AID, academic scholarships and grants, can equal a significant portion of the cost of tuition per year. Pacific's aggressive financial assistance program includes merit-based scholarships for academic excellence; talent awards in music, speech/debate and athletics; and a full range of federal and university grants, loans and work opportunities to make Pacific affordable to almost any student.

All students, regardless of need, should complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) between January 1 and February 15. You may obtain an application from the Financial Aid Office at Pacific, or from your current school. Transfer students must send Pacific a financial aid transcript from each college or university attended.

Students must be admitted to the university before an offer of financial aid will be made.

OUR TUITION CONTRACT is a way to help you and your family plan for future tuition adjustments. At Pacific, your tuition rate is frozen at the entering amount, and will only increase by the annual rate of inflation (commonly known as the Consumer Price Index). This means that the university contracts with you to hold your tuition rate constant at this year's dollars, with only CPI adjustments in subsequent years.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY
O R E G O N

WELCOME

Whether you are reading this publication as an insert with other correspondence; while standing in the lobby of beautiful Marsh Hall as you visit the campus; or with Pacific representatives at a civic club or chamber of commerce meeting, it is a pleasure to help introduce you to one of the Northwest's outstanding universities.

Pacific was founded by Congregationalist pioneers 144 years ago when Tabitha Brown, the "Mother of Oregon," dreamed of a school for orphans of the Oregon Trail. She joined with Rev. Harvey Clark and Rev. George Atkinson, both of whom wanted to extend the Congregational Church's heritage of founding outstanding colleges like Amherst, Oberlin, Carleton and Grinnell to the Oregon Territory. Together they created Pacific University.

Ours is a personal place, where professors, students and staff teach, and learn from, one another. We are a university built on the foundation of liberal arts and sciences values. Those values are extended to professional education in optometry, physical therapy, occupational therapy and clinical psychology.

There is much to discover at Pacific through our programs and through our students, faculty, staff and alumni. I encourage you to learn about our university through this brochure, and also to visit with us and to become a part of our academic community.

CAMPUS

Located in Forest Grove, Oregon, a small, historic town just outside of metropolitan Portland, Pacific enjoys the security and beauty of rural Oregon while maintaining easy access to the state's largest city, 25 miles away. The campus is situated in the center of Forest Grove and includes 27 buildings on a tree shaded 55-acre campus. The Oregon coast is only 50 miles to the west. The imposing architecture of giant Marsh Hall, built at the turn of the century, destroyed by fire and rebuilt in the 1970's, sets a tone of seriousness and determination at the center of the campus. From its beautiful carillon, chimes and music echo to classrooms, laboratories and residence halls.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY...

... values the highest standards of academic rigor, integrity and excellence.

ACADEMIC COMMUNITY

1,500 students of different ages, cultures, backgrounds, expectations and talents belong to the academic community of Pacific University. A small group in number, they join with faculty and staff to bring stimulation, argument and consensus to one another and to the community. The undergraduate College, the foundation of the University, consists of approximately 900 students.

ATHLETICS

Pacific fields several intercollegiate athletic teams including men's & women's soccer; men's and women's tennis and golf; women's volleyball; men's and women's cross country; men's wrestling; men's and women's basketball; women's softball; and men's baseball. A club handball team has also distinguished itself in national competition. Intramural sports are also a part of student life.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY...

...stresses student centered education that relies on interactive learning in and out of the classroom.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY...

...insists on the highest ethical standards in everything we do.

FACULTY

125 full-time professors teach at Pacific University. 84% of them hold the Ph.D. or terminal degree in their field. Pacific's academic program enjoys a 13:1 student to faculty ratio.

RESOURCES

In addition to the Harvey Scott Library with 400,000 titles, Pacific offers laboratory and classroom space in a variety of buildings. Health profession labs and clinics are also part of the campus. A new building to house music performance and practice rooms and a lecture/recital hall is under construction with opening scheduled for Fall '93. A new science building for biology, physics, mathematics and computer science has been designed and is expected to be built in the near future.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY...

...honors its traditions, enterprising spirit, and United Church of Christ heritage.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY...

...integrates the intellectual, ethical, and physical development of the individual student.
